Program Summary

The Jim Gamble Puppets will present their delightful production of Carnival of the Animals, spotlighting the appealing music of French composer Charles Camille Saint-Saens. The string and rod puppet actors perform within a proscenium stage using a special "curtain of light" technique. The puppeteer, clothed in black, completely disappears behind the lighted opening, creating a magical sense of the puppets having life and movement of their own. Although Saint-Saens wrote the original Carnival for his own family to enjoy, this production features the composer as a little boy imaginatively creating his own carnival characters.

Students will “meet” the prolific French composer, Saint-Saens, and also learn some interesting facts about him. This show offers learning experiences in the art of puppetry and classical music, in a way that is both humorous and heart-warming.

The students will learn about the arts of puppetry, storytelling, and classical music through Carnival of the Animals. As the puppets are accompanied by the music of Saint-Saens, students will have the opportunity to develop listening and analytical skills during and after the performance. Students will also develop an understanding of appropriate theater etiquette.

Teacher Development

Get to know Charles Camille Saint-Saens 1835-1921

French composer Camille Saint-Saens was born in Paris, October 9, 1835. As a child, Saint-Saens was musically precocious. At the age of seven he began to study the piano and harmony, and his first attempts at composition soon followed. In 1846, at the age of eleven, his debut as a pianist met with sensational success, but he withdrew from public performance to take up the formal study of composition and organ at the Paris Conservatory. In 1853 he established himself as a composer with his first symphony, and in 1858, began his tenure of twenty years as organist of the Church of the Madeleine.

Although he had twice failed to win a Prix de Rome, Saint-Saens won a government competition for a composition for the 1867 Exposition, and earned great praise from his most noted contemporaries. In 1868 he composed and performed his first piano concerto within three weeks. Between 1871 and 1876 he wrote four symphonic poems including the famous “Dance Macabre”

(“Dance of Death”) and “Rouet d’Omphale” (“Omphale’s Spinning Wheel”); his fourth piano concerto; and the oratorio “Le Deluge.” The opera “Samson et Dalila” had its first performance in 1877 at Weimar under the sponsorship of Franz Liszt. It was widely performed elsewhere in Germany and, after 1890, in France. The amusingly satirical “zoological fantasy” entitled “Le Carnaval des Animaux” (“The Carnival of the Animals”) was composed for a private performance for his family in 1886, but was not allowed to be publicly performed or published (save for one movement, “The Swan”) until 1922, after the composer’s death.

From these middle years of his life until his death at the age of eighty-six, Saint-Saens combined great musical productivity with much travel. While writing operas, symphonies, and chamber music he visited Egypt and Algeria, South America, and the United States. His great age and large output made Saint-Saens so respected a public figure in France that his death in Algiers on December 16, 1921, occasioned a national day of mourning.

A Few Words on Puppets

Puppets have been part of every culture from the most primitive to the most sophisticated. Puppet theaters probably developed in Italy during the seventeenth century. Characters from troupes of traveling actors, which had standard characters, became standard puppet characters as well. The most popular was Punchinello, a bragging, comic fellow who always made the audience laugh because of his clumsiness and foolishness. He became the Punch of Punch and Judy to the English tradition, Guignol to the French, Kasperle to the Germans, and Karagoz of the Middle East tradition. This character was the forerunner of the modern circus clown.

For all general purposes, a puppet is an inanimate object given life through imaginative movement and sound. Derived from the Latin word “pupa” meaning girl or doll, puppets have long existed both as an art form and as a vehicle for creative expression.

There are many different types of puppets. They are named by the way in which they are designed to be operated. Hand puppets are manipulated by the puppeteer’s hand inside the puppet. Rod puppets are controlled with rods, sometimes above the head and sometimes directly in front of the puppeteer. Simple finger puppets are controlled using the finger as part of the figure. Shadow puppets are operated in front of a light source, allowing the audience to see the performance by observing the projected shadows. String puppets are controlled with strings.

What is a Rod Puppet?

These figures are manipulated from below, but they are full-length, supported by a rod running inside the body to the head. Separate thin rods may move the hands and, if necessary, the legs. Figures of this type are traditional on the Indonesian islands of Java and Bali, where they are known as wayang golek. In Europe they were for a long time confined to the Rhineland; but in the early 20th century Richard Teschner in Vienna developed the artistic potentialities of this type of figure. In Moscow Nina Efimova carried out similar experimental productions and these may have inspired the State Central Puppet Theatre in Moscow, directed by Sergey Obraztsov, to develop this type of puppet during the 1930s. After World War II Obraztsov’s theater made many tours, especially in Eastern Europe, and a number of puppet theaters using rod puppets were founded as a result. Today the rod puppet is the usual type of figure in the large state-supported puppet theatres of Eastern Europe. In a similar movement in the United States, largely inspired by Marjorie Batchelder, the use of rod puppets was greatly developed in school and college theatres, and the hand-rod puppet was found to be of particular value. In this figure the hand passes inside the puppet’s body to grasp a short rod to the head, the arms being manipulated by rods in the usual way. One great advantage of this technique is that it permits bending of the body, the manipulator’s wrist corresponding to the puppet’s waist. Although in general the rod puppet is suitable for slow and dignified types of drama, its potentialities are many and of great variety. It is, however, extravagant in its demands on manipulators, requiring always one person, and sometimes two or three, for each figure on stage. - <http://www.britannica.com/EBchecked/topic/483732/puppetry/28721/Rod-puppets#ref=ref398532>

Pre-Activities

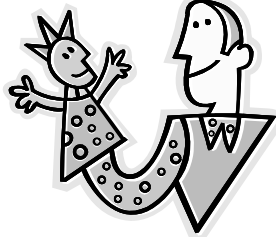

-  Familiarize your students with some of the key terms on the list provided. Set up a small puppet theater in your classroom using a box and hand puppet. As you add each item on the list define it for the children and tell them to look for these during the “Carnival of the Animals” performance.
-  Complete the Key Terms Match included in your packet. This will allow the children to have a working knowledge of some vocabulary associated with the trip.
-  Locate France on a world map or globe. Explain that Camille Saint-Saens was an important man in 19th century French culture and was a child prodigy in music. Encourage them to imagine how their interests as children could turn into a life’s work. Have them draw or write about what they imagine they will do as an adult.
-  Play some of the music from Saint-Saens’ Carnival of the Animals for your class. Help them to recognize how the music reflects the title animal.
-  Begin collecting materials for your students to make their own puppets following the performance. Some suggested items are: string, fabric scraps, Styrofoam balls, old socks, small sticks, tongue depressors, ribbon, yarn, buttons, bandannas, and old scarves.

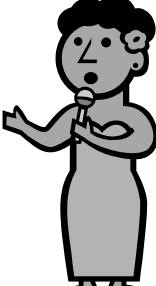

Post-Activities

-  Make your own puppets using the supplies you have gathered. Allow the children to attempt a few different options, finger puppet, sock puppet, rod puppet, and/or marionette.
-  Compare the Carnival of the Animals show you have seen with the other versions you read, watched, or listened to prior to your trip. Use some leading questions such as:
 - How was this performance different? Similar?
 - How did Mr. Gamble help you to understand how the puppets worked
 - Why do you think Saint-Saens chose each animal?
-  Read Ogden Nash’s poems based on the music. Write your own funny poem about one of the animals as a class. Allow the children to try their own versions as well.
-  Ask the children to write their own story for The Carnival of the Animals. Using grade-appropriate guidelines, encourage them to include what they think are the essential elements of the tale. For example, a kindergarten assignment may be a three section picture reflecting beginning, middle, and end. Assess the writing for key elements of the tale. They may include, but are not limited to:
 -  Does it have a clear beginning, middle, and end?
 -  Does it include an animal that does something silly?
 -  Does this silliness seem like something a person would do (personification)?

CARNIVAL OF THE ANIMALS

Poems by Ogden Nash

INTRODUCTION

Camille Saint-Saens
Was wracked with pains,
When people addressed him,
As Saint-Saens.
He held the human race to blame,
Because it could not pronounce his name,
So, he turned with metronome and fife,
To glorify other kinds of life,
Be quiet please - for here begins
His salute to feathers, fur and fins.

THE LION

The lion is the king of beasts,
And husband of the lioness.
Gazelles and things on which he feasts
Address him as your highness.
There are those that admire that roar of his,
In the African jungles and velds,
But, I think that wherever the lion is,
I'd rather be somewhere else.

COCKS AND HENS

The rooster is a roistering hoodlum,
His battle cry is cock- a- doodleum.
Hands in pockets, cap over eye,
He whistles at pullets, passing by.

THE WILD DONKEY

Have ever you harked to the donkey wild,
Which scientists call the onager?
It sounds like the laugh of an idiot child,
Or a hepcat on a harmoniger,
But do not sneer at the donkey wild,
There is a method in his heehaw,
For with maidenly blush and accent mild
The donkey answers shee-haw.

THE TORTOISE

Come crown my brow with leaves of myrtle,
I know the tortoise is a turtle,
Come carve my name in stone immortal,
I know the turtoise is a tortle.
I know to my profound despair,
I bet on one to beat a hare,
I also know I'm now a pauper,
Because of its tortley, turtley, torper.

THE ELEPHANT

Elephants are useful friends,
Equipped with handles at both ends,
They have a wrinkled moth proof hide,
Their teeth are upside down, outside,
If you think the elephant preposterous,
You've probably never seen a rhinosterous.

KANGAROOS

The kangaroo can jump incredible,
He has to jump because he is edible,
I could not eat a kangaroo,
But many fine Australians do,
Those with cookbooks as well as boomerangs,
Prefer him in tasty kangaroo meringues.

THE AQUARIUM

Some fish are minnows,
Some are whales,
People like dimples,
Fish like scales,
Some fish are slim,
And some are round,
They don't get cold,
They don't get drowned,
But every fishwife
Fears for her fish,
What we call mermaids
They call merfish.

MULES

In the world of mules
There are no rules.
(Laughing, In the world of mules
There are no rules)

THE CUCKOO IN THE WILD

Cuckoos lead bohemian lives,
They fail as husbands and as wives,
Therefore, they cynically disparage
Everybody else's marriage

BIRDS

Puccini was Latin, and Wagner Teutonic,
And birds are incurably philharmonic,
Suburban yards and rural vistas
Are filled with avian Andrew Sisters.
The skylark sings a roundelay,
The crow sings "The Road to Mandalay,"
The nightingale sings a lullaby,
And the sea gull sings a gullaby.
That's what shepherds listened to in Arcadia
Before somebody invented the radia.

PIANISTS

Some claim that pianists are human,
Heh, and quote the case of Mr. Truman.
Saint Saens on the other hand,
Considered them a scurvy band,
A blight they are he said, and simian,
Instead of normal men and wimian.

FOSSILS

At midnight in the museum hall,
The fossils gathered for a ball,
There were no drums or saxophones,
But just the clatter of their bones,
Rolling, rattling carefree circus,
Of mammoth polkas and mazurkas,
Pterodactyls and brontosaurus
Sang ghostly prehistoric choruses,
Amid the mastodonic wassail
I caught the eye of one small fossil,
"Cheer up sad world," he said and winked,
"It's kind of fun to be extinct."

THE SWAN

The swan can swim while sitting down,
For pure conceit he takes the crown,
He looks in the mirror over and over,
And claims to have never heard of Pavlova.

THE GRAND FINALE

Now we've reached the grand finale,
On an animalie, carnivalie,
Noises new to sea and land,
Issue from the skillful band,
All the strings contort their features,
Imitating crawly creatures,
All the brasses look like mumps
From blowing umpah, umpah, umps,
In outdoing Barnum and Bailey, and Ringling,
Saint Saens has done a miraculous thingling.

(August 19, 1902 – May 19, 1971) was a 20th century American poet well known for his light verse. He is an excellent example to use when teaching children about poetic license, as he often created or manipulated words to serve the rhyme and rhythm of his poems.

Are You Ready To Visit The Society of the Four Arts?

What does it mean when the lights blink in the hallway outside of an auditorium?

- A. The theater is trying to save electricity
- B. There is a problem with the light bulbs
- C. It is a special effect to make the theater seem interesting
- D. It is time to go into the theater and sit down

The answer is D. The lights blinking means that the performance is going to start in just a few minutes. Your teacher or chaperone will lead you to your seats so you don't miss anything.

When should you go to the restroom when at a performance?

- A. During the quiet parts
- B. During the loud parts
- C. When there are only a couple of people on stage
- D. Before or after the performance so I don't disturb anyone

The answer is D. Even if you try to be very quiet, getting up in the middle of the performance bothers the people sitting around you and can distract the performers. Try to go to the bathroom before or after a performance so you can concentrate on what's happening on stage.

When is it OK to talk during a performance?

- A. When my friends are talking
- B. When I think of something funny
- C. If it's loud enough that the performer can't hear me talking.
- D. When the performer asks the audience a question

The answer is D. Remaining quiet unless asked a question shows the performer that you care about what they are doing or saying, and helps the people who are sitting around you hear the program. Even if your friends are talking, it is good theater manners to remain quiet.

What should you do with food and drink when attending a performance at The Four Arts?

- A. Sneak it in under my jacket
- B. Ask my teacher to hold it
- C. Hide it in a plant or behind a chair
- D. Leave it in a safe place, such as the bus or the car, and enjoy it later.

The answer is D. The Four Arts doesn't allow food or drinks in the auditorium at all. Sneaking or hiding food is not allowed either.

After the performance, sometimes the performers take questions from the audience. If you are called on, what should you do?

- A. Stand Up
- B. Speak Slowly
- C. Speak Very Loudly
- D. All of the Above

The answer is D. If the performer asks "Does anyone have any questions?" by all means, raise your hand! If you get called on, speaking slowly, loudly and standing up helps the performer and the audience hear your question.
